ABSTRACT

Some implementations provide a resource planning system for receiving a first scheduling request for a resource's time. This first scheduling request may include a date range and the estimated amount of time needed from the resource, but does not necessarily 5   include concrete date and time facts. This first scheduling request may be refined by a second scheduling request, which specifies concrete date and time facts to schedule a portion of the resource's time that was originally requested by the first scheduling request.

10   60185945.doc